International Human Rights Advisory Council

International Human Rights Advisory Council (IHRAC) is constituted by All India Council of Human Rights, Liberties and social Justice. IHRAC is designed to provide the programmatic divisions at Human Rights with substantive and policy advice. They are also used to deepen the engagement of key members of the AICHLS community in the organization's programmatic work. IHRAC is played wider role to bring the broader activist and academic community concerned with human rights.

As IHRAC engages in more multi-polar advocacy and takes on more complicated rights issues, our program workforce rely on the advice of policy experts and NGO partners, both global and local. Advisory Council helps us identify and conceptualize emerging human rights issues. They ensure that we are thinking analytically and progressively about the most important political and economic trends. Advisory Council members sharpen our advocacy and connect us to key decision-makers, journalists, government officials, and human rights activists. Finally, they disseminate our reports and statements to the media and other relevant outlets, such as conferences and universities.

International Human Rights Advisory Council comprises people who have deep and broad experience in political, economic, and social affairs, broadly speaking, as well as in human rights, more specifically. Council members usually represent the fields of law, journalism, social activism, public health, academia, or other professions related to human rights. They advance human rights principles and practices in their own work. They elicit great respect in their fields and communities and have good contacts with donors, journalists, and/or policymakers at national, regional and/or international levels.
